Toy Resources:

Following is a list of some websites from which you can order toys that have been specially designed with the needs of children with disabilities in mind. If you have found sites that you think are worth sharing, please let me know!

- Sarah Bickford, TVI Anchor Center for Blind Children

- www.aph.org - American Printing House for the Blind (products, tips, suggestions etc.)
- www.ablenet.com - switches, augmentative communication devices, some toys
- www.disabilityresources.org - suggestions for toys and other resources
- www.dragonflytoys.com - toys and great tips / articles etc under the "Universal access resources" tab
- www.exceptionalteaching.com - toys and games, arts and crafts *parent recommendation
- www.flaghouse.com - toys and physical education equipment
- www.ropard.org - specifically geared towards retinopathy of prematurity, but great for visual impairments in general. This site is organized developmentally and has lots of good tips for working with children with visual impairments.
  - www.sandbox-learning.com - This is a wonderful site that creates personalized success stories for children revolving around everyday activities (like potty or changing activities). The great thing about it is that you can make the child in the book look just like your child - complete with glasses, wheelchair, augmentative communication device etc.
